"Alamo...The Price of Freedom"

Texas' Biggest Story on Texas' Biggest Screen.

Filmed in the summer of 1987 at Happy Shahan's Alamo Village near Brackettville, Texas, the existing set was used for the 1960 film "The Alamo." The set was extensively reconditioned and restored based upon the latest Alamo research.

Director Keith Merrill matched the spirit of the screenplay with the historical period on a scale unequalled in the previous 13 Alamo movies. More than 500 historical reenactors created both the Mexican and Texian armies using authentic uniforms, weapons and equipment. The result is the Cowboy Hall of Fame's 1988 Wrangler Award for Best Historic Western Film.

"Alamo...The Price of Freedom" premiered in San Antonio at the IMAX Theatre Rivercenter on March 6, 1988, the one hundred fifty-second anniversary of the Alamo battle. The IMAX Theatre is located 200 steps from The Alamo in Rivercenter. The 61 x 84 foot screen and 32 speaker, six-track stereo sound system put the viewer directly in the center of the action. Sit back and watch this epic story unfold on the incredible IMAX screen.

IMAX and The Alamo, it's an experience you'll always remember.
